Learners:
- We prepare learners for spiritual, independent, reflective, self-directed learning, because we believe that learning continues throughout life.
- We support learning activities that engage their interest and motivation, because we believe that learners are the centre of curriculum.
- We promote skills, knowledge and attitudes that are future focused, because we believe in preparing learners of fulfilling, productive lives.
- We seek ways to extend appropriate learning opportunities beyond existing boundaries, because we believe in developing the potential of every learner.

Learning:
- We proclaim that Jesus gives meaning to life and learning, because we believe in Jesus as the way, the truth and the life.
- We support increasing flexibility to accommodate individual learning needs, because we believe in recognizing and meeting individual needs.
- We accommodate diversity so that cultural and individual differences do not compromise learning opportunities, because we believe in equity.
- We support learning environments that sustain positive relationships, particularly between teacher and student, because we believe people are our most valuable learning resource.

Learning Communities:
- We strive to build learning communities in which faith, life and culture are integrated, because we believe in the mission of the Catholic school to give witness to Jesus and the Gospel.
- We support sharing vision, decision-making and action with all education partners, because we believe in shared responsibility.
- We create conditions for positive change that in turn fosters positive learning environments, because we believe in continuous improvement.
- We support learning communities that promote these qualities, because we believe that authenticity and relevance engage learners.

UNIT Summary:
The unit will consider the “Movement of peoples”, in particular the movement of European settlers, the vanguard of which was pastoralists whose march on the Herbert River Valley resulted in the displacement of the Indigenous peoples. (ACOKFH015) The clearing of their hunting grounds and the natural habitat for cattle grazing and crop growing had devastating effects on not only the Aboriginal population but the native fauna and flora. Furthermore, the resultant deculturation pushed the Aboriginal people to the margins of society and economic activity. (ACOKFH017)

Students will come to an understanding of the imperatives that drove European settlement and the cultural attitudes that underpinned the settlers’ relationship with the Aboriginal peoples whose lands they assumed. (ACOKFH017, ACOKFH019) Conversely students will gain an authentic opportunity to come to an appreciation of the effects of the displacement on the traditional landowners. While they will learn of how local Indigenous people were exploited by showmen such as the famous P.T. Barnum in his circus designed to show “all the uncivilised races in existence”, they will on the other hand, learn that there were Europeans, such as James Cassady, labelled a “black protector”, who were prepared to stand up to the authorities in order to protect the Indigenous people. (ACOKFH019)

In an excursion to Mungalla Station, students will experience firsthand, aspects of Queensland’s European pioneering history. They will learn about Nywaigi culture and particular traditional artefacts and their uses. They will hear stories told by the traditional owners about their people, the Nywaigi, James Cassady and his family and the Australian South Sea Islanders (Kanakas), indentured labourers, who also had encampments on the property. Students will tour the property and see not only a working cattle property but restored wetlands where native birds and other wildlife including crocodiles abound. They can view the Captive Lives: Looking for Tambo and his companions photographic exhibition housed in the Mungalla homestead and sample a Kup Murri – a feast cooked in an underground oven.
The overview answers the following questions for the teacher and student. This unit will be focusing on student inquiry to the big questions of:

The unit specific big questions are:
Key question: What were the effects, short and long term, of the European incursion into Indigenous homelands, that became the Herbert River district, on not only the Indigenous peoples, but the flora and fauna?
. What social and economic imperatives drove the movement of European settlers into such newly opened areas of colonial Australia as the Herbert River district?
. What were the responses, both European and Indigenous to the conflict that resulted from the occupation of Nywaigi traditional lands by European pastoral and sugar plantation interests?
. How do the contrasting opinions and beliefs typical of people of the 19th century, such as P.T. Barnum and James Cassady, reflect in and continue to shape our thinking in the 21st century?
These sit within the key inquiry questions at this year level which are:
. What were the changing features of the movements of people from 1750 to 1918?
. Did new ideas and technological developments contribute to change in this period?
. What were the responses, both European and Indigenous to the conflict that resulted from the occupation of Nywaigi traditional lands by European pastoral and sugar plantation interests?
. How do the contrasting opinions and beliefs typical of people of the 19th century, such as P.T. Barnum and James Cassady, reflect in and continue to shape our thinking in the 21st century?

This unit provides the opportunity for my students to develop and practice the skills of a lifelong learner. This unit will focus on:
(please tick 2 only)
Community Contributor ☐ Designer and Creator ☐ Effective Communicator ☐ A Knowledgeable person ☒
Complex Thinker ☐ Reflective Learner ☒ Active Investigator ☐ Leader and Collaborator

General Capabilities
The GCs which learners will engage are:

Literacy
a) Development of specialised vocabulary (glossaries) including developing recognition of language of bias, language characteristic of a time and place, language as it evolves with changing social attitudes and mores. (See Year 9 English Content Descriptions Language: Understand that Standard Australian English is a living language within which the creation and loss of words and the evolution of usage is ongoing (ACELA1550))
b) Formative and summative tasks develop an ability to interpret text with an understanding that text is influenced by cultural perspectives and other texts (See Year ( English Content Descriptions Literacy: Analyse how the construction and interpretation of texts, including media texts, can be influenced by cultural perspectives and other texts(ACELY1739)).

ICT

Cross Curriculum priorities
CCPs which will learners engage are:
Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander (South Sea Islander) histories and culture
a) Experience at Mungalla Station Nywaigi culture and particular traditional artefacts and their uses. Hear stories told by the traditional owners about their people, the Nywaigi, James Cassady and his family
b) Learn of how local indigenous people were exploited by showmen such as the famous P.T. Barnum Circus
c) Reflect on the Australian South Sea Islanders (Kanakas), indentured labourers’ experience who also had encampments on the property.

Sustainability
The clearing of the Aborigine’s hunting grounds and the natural habitat for cattle grazing and crop growing had devastating effects on native fauna and flora.

a) Explore today’s Mungalla Station which boasts restored wetlands
a) Completion of formative research tasks in Word document
b) Completion of summative tasks in Word document
c) Development of appropriate web search skills, for example the use of TROVE, State Library (Queensland).

Critical and creative thinking
Using evidence to evaluate prior knowledge and understandings, consider alternatives and reach conclusions related to Europeans settler and Indigenous relationships and interactions in the 19th century.

Ethical understanding
a) Reflect on elements of the European settler and Indigenous interaction in the 19th century, achieving empathy and balanced understanding of the values and priorities that shaped the behaviours and responses of either group

Intercultural understanding
a) Appreciate and understand the effects of European settlement on the Indigenous people and the long term effects that resulted from the clearing of their hunting grounds and the natural habitat for cattle grazing and crop growing.
b) Appreciate and understand both, how the resultant deculturation pushed the Aboriginal people to the margins of society and economic activity, and the long term effects of that.

Relevant prior curriculum
Students already appreciate from their Year 4,5 and 6 studies First Contacts, The Australian Colonies and Australia as a Nation, the reasons why Australia was colonized, the push and pull factors that drove that colonization and the effects that colonization had on the Indigenous peoples that already inhabited the continent. The students discovered in their Year 8 studies of the Western and Islamic world, the Asia-Pacific world and Expanding Contacts that the movement of peoples is a constant characteristic of human endeavour. They have learnt that the movement of peoples has irrevocable consequences for the people that are encountered or conquered in waves of human movement.

Historical skills development – location of sources; identification of origin and purposes of sources; use sources as evidence; draw conclusions on usefulness; identify points of view; attitudes and values; develop texts using evidence from a range of acknowledged primary and secondary sources.

Achievement Standards expected
By the end of Year 9, students refer to key events and the actions of individuals and groups to explain patterns of change and continuity over time. They analyse the causes and effects of events and developments and make judgments about their importance. They explain the motives and actions of people at the time. Students explain the significance of these events and developments over the short and long term. They explain different interpretations of the past.

Students sequence events and developments within a chronological framework, with reference to periods of time and their duration. When researching, students develop different kinds of questions to frame an historical inquiry. They interpret, process, analyse and organise information from a range of primary and secondary sources and use it as evidence to answer inquiry questions. Students examine sources to compare different points of view. When evaluating these sources, they analyse origin and purpose, and draw conclusions about their usefulness. They develop their own interpretations about the past. Students develop texts, particularly explanations and discussions, incorporating historical interpretations. In developing these texts, and organising and presenting their conclusions, they use historical terms and concepts, evidence identified in sources, and they reference these sources.
Strands and Content descriptions:
THE MOVEMENT OF PEOPLE: (1750-1901)

Students investigate key aspects of the movement of peoples during the early days of the pastoral and agricultural development of frontier Australia, and the affects this movement of European pastoralists and planters, their families and livestock had on the Indigenous peoples and their traditional home lands. The nature and significances of these movements: that of the pastoralists and planters, and that enforced on the Indigenous people, will be explored. Both the short and the long-term impacts of the movement of peoples in frontier Australia will be investigated.

1) Changes in the way of life of a group(s) of people who moved to Australia in this period, such as free settlers on the frontier in Australia (ACDSEH084)
2) The short and long-term impacts of the movement of peoples during this period (ACDSEH085)

HISTORICAL SKILLS
Chronology (ACHHS164)
Time-line 1861 – 1901
- taming of the north: pastoralists, planters and miners. Land selection, squatting and settlement: key events with focus northern Queensland

Historical terms and concepts (ACHHS165)
- overlander, overlanded, pioneering, plantation, pastoral conquest, pastoral enterprise, frontier, selection, run, station, squatter, planter, pastoralist, grazier, pioneer coloured labour, coolie labour, Kanaka, South Sea Islander, Indigenous, Aboriginal, Aborigine, blacks, gin, Natives, nomadic, traditional lands, homeland, displacement, displaced, homestead, hut, improvement, guerrilla warfare, punitive action, etc.

Historical questions and research (ACHHS166) (ACHHS167) (ACHHS168)
Task will require the selection and identification of different kinds of questions about the past to inform historical inquiry using relevant sources which have been identified and located using ICT and other methods after evaluation and enhancement of the inquiry questions.

Analysis and use of sources (ACHHS169) (ACHHS170) (ACHHS171)
Tasks will involve analysis of sources to reveal understanding of points of view conveyed.
Secondary sources:
- Texts
Primary sources:
- Photographs, letters, government documents

Perspectives and interpretations (ACHHS172) (ACHHS173)
- of the European pioneering experience
- of the Indigenous experience
- of the Colonial Government actions and policies
- of the South Sea Islander (Kanaka) indentured labour
- of the Black v White debate

Explanation and Communication (ACHHS174) (ACHHS175)
Develop texts using evidence from a range of referenced sources and presented in a range of communication forms.
Formative

Suggestions:

a) Explore what attitudes are revealed in the letters from Letters to the Editor including those headed “The Way we Civilize” and “Black v White”. Compare and contrast the opposing views and speculate how those views conformed or diverged from the values and attitudes of the wider society at that time. Consider why some newspapers decided to include the writer of one letter’s initials only rather than his full name? Speculation should be substantiated by evidence from primary and secondary sources.

AND/OR

b) Land was a source of conflict following the arrival of the Europeans. Using primary and secondary sources write a speech speaking from the viewpoint of an Indigenous person that explains what that person may have felt about the European invasion of the traditional homelands of Mungalla and what they foresaw as being the long term consequences for their people.

AND/OR

c) Conduct a web search of images – photographs, paintings and cartoons, to research the ways that Indigenous peoples appear and are portrayed in the 19th century. What do those images reveal about the deculturation of Aboriginal people? What do they reveal about Europeans’ attitudes to the Aborigines and on the other hand, the Aborigines’ attitudes to the Europeans? What roles are they

Key Question:
What were the effects, short and long term, of the European incursion into Indigenous homelands, that became the Herbert River district, on not only the Indigenous peoples, but the flora and fauna?

TEACHER EXPOSITION: Setting the scene: Settlement of North Queensland within the context of the wider settlement of Australia and movement of peoples from the British Isles and elsewhere in Europe.

Students will examine these sub-questions to establish the impact of European incursion into Indigenous homelands:

a. What social and economic imperatives drove the movement of European settlers into the newly opened areas of colonial Australia, including the Herbert River district?
   - occupation in order to affirm colonial possession
   - exploitation for economic gain
   - settlement in order to realize economic objectives: pastoralism, agriculture, mining, ports and townships
   - belief that the continent was unoccupied by any people who had legitimate prior claim to the land; it was an empty land
   - belief that the Indigenous people were at best “noble savages” at worst a primitive race, doomed for extinction
   - the belief that the dispossession of the Indigenous inhabitants and the destruction of Indigenous society was inevitable

LEARNING EXPERIENCES: Wordles, Venn diagrams; Cause and Effect sequencing; Brainstorming and mind mapping of ideas and concepts; Matching games: words-definitions; emotions-events; role playing

b) What were the responses, both European and Indigenous to the conflict that resulted from the occupation of Nywaigi traditional lands by European pastoral and agricultural interests?

Teachers will need to be aware of cultural sensitivities of the Indigenous students in their class.

These sensitivities may relate to photographic images of deceased persons or to content of the primary sources which may cause distress due to its explicit nature. It needs to be impressed on students that the potentially distressing language and images occurs in material drawn from nineteenth century authors and sources and reflects the social attitudes of that time.

c) How do the contrasting opinions and beliefs typical of people of the 19th century, such as P.T. Barnum and James Cassady, reflect in and continue to shape our thinking in the 21st century?

PROGRESSIVE:
. Aboriginal reserves remaining in 1983 were handed back to local Aboriginal communities with the Aboriginal Land Rights Act of 1983
. the return of Aboriginal remains to their homelands
. recognition of the STOLEN GENERATION and efforts made to compensate
. acknowledgement of the rightful attribution of names e.g.: South Sea Islanders rather than Torres Strait Islanders for Kanaka descendants; ancestral group names e.g.: Nywaigi

Indigenous people included on census in 1967 in 1969 legislation repealed that allowed for forcible removal of children from their families land rights – native title issues. the Aboriginal Land Rights Act (Northern Territory) passed by Commonwealth Parliament in 1976 In 1992 the High Court of Australia handed down its decision in Mabo v Queensland that Australia was never terra nullius, or empty land and that native title exists over particular kinds of lands being unalienated Crown Lands, national parks and reserves. This was followed by the Native Titles Act of 1993. In 1999 the Federal Parliament passed a motion of ‘deep and sincere regret over the removal of Aboriginal children from their parents’. In 2008 Prime Minister Kevin Rudd on behalf of the Commonwealth Parliament made a national apology. traditional ownership is now routinely acknowledged in documents and at public events

REGRESSIVE:
- continued residence in former reserves such as Palm Island.
- the continuing display by museums of Indigenous peoples’ remains
- the disproportionate number of Indigenous people in custody
- deaths in custody
- paternalistic Government policies beginning with the Aborigines Protection Act of 1869 (Victoria) which controlled where Aboriginal people could live and gave the Governor the power to order the removal of a child from its family. While these legislations have been repealed much of Government legislation governing Aboriginal people is paternalistic in nature

LEARNING EXPERIENCES: compare statistics suggested by Advance Courier, P.T. Barnum for Aboriginal population in 1884 and Aboriginal population in 2014 and preceding censuses. Indigenous people are living today or do they perpetuate a stereotype?

ADDITIONAL FOCUS:
AUSTRALIAN SOUTH SEA ISLANDERS OR KANAKAS

Australian South Sea Islanders are Australian descendants of people from the islands in the Western Pacific area – including the Solomon Islands and Vanuatu (formerly the New Hebrides) in Melanesia and the Loyalty Islands, Samoa, Kiribati, Rotuma and Tuvalu in Polynesia and Micronesia – who were recruited between the mid to late 19th century as labour for the sugarcane fields of Queensland. Some were kidnapped or “blackbirded” for indentured service.

These South Sea Islanders have commonly been referred to as Kanakas, which means “man” and comes from a Polynesian word, ‘tangata’, The term today is considered derogatory for its connotations of exploitation of Islander people by white planters.

Owing to intermarriage, many Australian South Sea Islanders claim a mixed ancestry which can include Aboriginals, Torres Strait Islanders and immigrants from the South Pacific Islands.

However, the Australian South Sea Islander community has been recognised as a unique minority group since 1994 following a report – Call for Recognition Report - by the Human Rights and Equal Opportunity Commission which investigated their social and economic situation compared to that of wider Australian community.

While some of the people brought to work in the sugar fields as indentured labour –Kanakas, were from the Torres Straits most were from outside that area and not from land that was under the political jurisdiction of Queensland.

Torres Strait Islanders, on the other hand, are the indigenous people of the Torres Strait Islands which are part of Queensland, Australia (see the Coral and Arafura Sea). Like the people of Papua New Guinea they are culturally and genetically Melanesian people.

They are distinct from the Aboriginal people of the rest of Australia, and are generally referred to separately since 1990 when their status as a separate Indigenous group within Australia was acknowledged with the formation of the Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Commission.

It was the strength of conviction of Eddie Mabo whose people were the traditional owners of Mer Island (Murray Island), in the Torres Straits, that led him to challenge the Queensland Supreme Court, questioning the government’s right to prevent his people using their land. When the Court ruled against him he took his battle to the High Court of Australia which in ruling in 1992, that the Meriman People did have native title of their traditional lands, Mer Island, effectively recognized under law that Australia was not, and had never been a terra nullius and that European settlement did not automatically wipe out native title.

James Cassady allowed time expired Kanakas (Australian South Sea Islanders) to camp on Mungalla and the location of their former camp sites and burial sites can be identified by the traditional owners today.
